The Science of Leadership

This engaging and practical workshop features stimulating presentations, small group discussions and large group coaching demonstrations. “Live” issues of attendees will be used to demonstrate powerful leadership skills and strategies.

What you will learn:

- Leadership facts most leaders don’t think about
- Signs of “learned helplessness” at work and at home
- Odd and accurate ideas that help others grow
- Coaching skills and strategies that promote maturity
- What we can learn from alpha wolves, primates and elephants

Real-world benefits:

- Raise “sticky” relationship questions to a world-class mentor
- Discover how to connect when connecting is difficult
- Develop a sharper instinct about “what’s really going on here”

Presenter

John Engels is founder and president of Leadership Coaching, Inc., an executive consulting firm in Upstate New York, focused on the mentoring and growth of CEOs, presidents, their executive teams and their families.

After growing up working in his family’s business, John graduated with a communications degree from St. Bonaventure University and earned an M.A. in theology from the Graduate Theological Union in Berkeley, California. For the past 13 years, he has studied and presented at the Bowen Center for the Study of the Family in Washington, DC. John has delivered leadership lectures for the Young Presidents Organization, University of Rochester Medical Center, University of Vermont Family Business Center, Georgetown Family Center, Simon School of Business, American Society of Certified Public Accountants, Japan Family Center and numerous other professional organizations, industry associations, and national and international symposia and conventions.

John’s leadership development experience has included professional partnerships (accounting, medical, dental, legal, engineering, etc.), family businesses, educational and religious institutions, government organizations, and global corporations representing many sectors of the service and manufacturing sectors. His annual Advanced Leadership Course for CEOs has been recognized nationally for its depth and practical emphasis on high-level functioning at work and home.

“Throughout nature, the purpose of leadership is to promote maturity and responsibility in the pack, herd or troop. It is the same in humans. Whether the group is a family, a business or a nation, the leader’s never-to-be-forgotten job is to establish the kind of presence that helps others grow in confidence, competence and maturity.”
John Engels
